A photograph of a traffic light system against a clear blue sky. The system consists of a horizontal wire with several traffic light assemblies and a sign. From left to right: a traffic light with three lenses, all of which are dark; a rectangular white sign with black text that reads "THIS LIGHT NEVER TURNS GREEN"; a traffic light with three lenses, where the top lens is illuminated red; a small, rectangular white sign hanging from the wire; and finally, another traffic light with three lenses, all of which are dark. The traffic lights are suspended from the wire by short vertical metal arms. The overall scene is a humorous or ironic commentary on traffic signals.
